Foreword

Through the looking glass into the future go the members of our graduating class. Some of us know what the future holds; to others it is an uncharted course. We have likened this experience to the progression of the seasons. As each season is a distinct part of a complete year, so are our high school years a part of each of our lives.

This book, the 1961 EAGLE, reflects many of the poignant moments of our Senior year in high school.

We dedicate this yearbook to Mr. Ollie P. Jones, our friend and former teacher. Although he retired after thirty years of teaching last year, Mr. Jones remains a part of Francis Scott Key. We remember him most for his gentle spirit and dedicated search for truth.

The way we remember him best—working in the science laboratory.

Mr. Richter awards Mr. Jones a plaque for many years of service in the teaching profession.

Never an idle moment — one of Mr. Jones' favorite pursuits is woodworking in his shop.

Special Education Class

Through the courtesy of the Board of Education, one of the east rooms of Francis Scott Key housed a special education class of nine boys and girls over sixteen years of age.

Their training program is sponsored by the Carroll County Association for the Retarded Children and is financed entirely by public donations.

We, the students of Francis Scott Key, appreciate the contractions made by Room 6.

Leaves drop lowly from their foliaged posterity,
Drifting slowly to the moistened earth.
Seeds fall motionlessly from the seasoned limbs
To sprout the spring and reign o'er life again.

We have graduated from a secure and sheltered world into a panorama of speeding life and limitless boundaries. The soil and rain of our lives are our education and our first two decades of life—one being fruitless without the other. The seedlings are ourselves, and the ideals, morals, hopes, and dreams which will decide whether we shall become winter's barren spores or spring's creative buds.

We shall bid farewell to our school and many of our friends; yet, we shall welcome the life which lies before us in the years of maturity, the years of accomplishments and the years of awakening.

1961 Key Graduates

To you, our subscribers, patrons and Class of '61, we present the 1961 Eagle. This yearbook is a product of the combined efforts and co-operation of many. Mr. Broening, our loyal advisor, Mr. Magee, our willing photographer, and Mr. Kanowicz, our supporting principal, have all assisted us in this endeavor. Also, are are indebted to our advertisers without whose backing a yearbook would be impossible. To the teachers of Francis Scott Key we express our appreciation for their interest and compliance during this year.

Thus, the school year has come to a close, and the last pages of a yearbook completed; we of the staff sense a feeling of both regret and happiness—regret for leaving an interesting job, happiness from a satisfaction of accomplishment. We sincerely hope that you will hold this yearbook with the esteem of tradition through the years.
